

You Can Listen Your Way to Better Relationships

Using a light touch and sensible approach, Why Don't We Listen Better? puts Jim Petersen's forty years of professional experience at the service of the reader to improve relationships. His "flat-brain theory," Talker-Listener Card, and listening techniques show how to turn win-lose communication into come-alive cooperation. These ideas and tools improve talking & listening skills at work, on a date, in a corporate setting, or at a kitchen table. They are changing lives.

Petersen Publications
ISBN 978-0-9791559-0-1
240 Pages $18.95
www.PetersenPublications.com

This book features listening:

- for couples who want to improve their communication
- to upset teenagers or parents
- to confused friends or spouses
- to everyone at the family dinner table
- for mental health professionals
- for counselors, consultants and negotiators
- to grief stricken friends
- for group leaders
- for work groups and salespeople
- to disgruntled employees or irritated bosses
- to yourself when you are bothered or unclear
- for leaders of faith communities
- to enhance business collaboration worldwide

"[this book]...takes the reader and user of Jim's innovative techniques on a journey into a higher quality of life. This is more than a self-help book. I've used it to teach communication skills and insights in my marriage and family course in college."

—Gerald W. Bertsch, teacher, author, consultant, Fond du Lac, WI

"What an eye-opener! When I started the book I thought I was a good listener. Now I know better. I am a card-carrying listener/talker now. Insightful, thought-provoking, and thoroughly enjoyable to read."

—Jim Misko, commercial realtor and author, Anchorage, AK

"...a dynamic and easy to use system...should be required reading for every educator and everyone else interested in improving their relationships."

—Patrick Stone, Ed.D., educator and author, Vancouver, WA

Dr. Jim Petersen focuses on communication workshops, speaking to groups, and working with couples. His material has benefited corporate clients, city governments, colleges and universities, the hearing-impaired community, mental health professionals, students, teachers, parents, couples, churches and group leaders. His Talker-Listener card helps keep relationships on track long after people leave his classes and office. Dr. Petersen and his writer wife Sally live in the Northwest.

Available: STL DISTRIBUTION
Ingram/Spring Arbor Baker & Taylor Partners West Anchor